

A distinguishing feature of any organisation is that it is never satisfied with what it has achieved, and that instead it strives for constant improvement. I believe that this is very evident in Caversham Primary School and everyone involved in it: its excellent and inspiring head teacher, Ruth Perry, the enormously dedicated and talented teaching and support staff, the hugely supportive parent body - and of course the children themselves.

I and all the other Governors are delighted to be involved with the School, and to assist in helping each one of our children flourish and develop in every aspect of their school lives.
